

Interactive comment on “The EISCAT meteor-head method - a review and recent observations” by A. Pellinen-Wannberg

Anonymous Referee #1

Received and published: 24 February 2004

In your response 3, I think you should write "HPLA radar usually have very narrow beams due to their very small wavelength to diameter quotient"

There are Arecibo altitude distributions observed at 430 MHz (e.g., Janches et al.). Which Arecibo VHF observations (46.8 MHz) are you referring to?

---

Interactive comment on Atmos. Chem. Phys. Discuss., 4, 21, 2004.

Full Screen / Esc

Print Version

Interactive Discussion

Discussion Paper